

DWAYNE MARSHALL

Director of Programs & Partnerships

Dwayne recently served as Program Manager for The H.O.P.E. Institute for Leadership and Living (HILL). The mission of HILL is to provide a platform which enables youth to become social change agents that make a positive impact in the world. Through exposure to leadership development training, civic engagement opportunities and community service, The H.O.P.E. Institute for Leadership and Living, provides youth with the skills, resources and access necessary to become the next generation of inspirational leaders for local, national and global impact.

In addition to HILL, Dwayne has been involved with various organizations that promote social justice, community empowerment and youth education. He previously served as an “Organizer-In-Residence” with the Southern Partners Fund. Dwayne also played a key role in launching the Young Leaders for Social Change (YLSC) convening and the Social Justice Institute (SJI). He is a recent graduate of the New Leaders Council, Georgia Stand Up Policy Institute for Civic Leadership and the Georgia Association of Latino Elected Officials (GALEO) Leadership Program. Additionally, Dwayne is a member of the Jackie Robinson Foundation Scholarship Selection Committee and a member of Ray of Hope Christian Church Men’s Council where he assists in the curriculum development of their Transformers Rites of Passage Program for Young Men. He has worked on local, state and national political campaigns to help further support candidates seeking to bring increased economic and educational opportunity to citizens in the state of Georgia.

Prior to building HILL, Dwayne served as a Regional Field Director & Get Out The Vote (GOTV) Lead for the Obama-Biden Campaign for Change during the 2008 presidential election. In this role, Mr. Marshall led the field operations for Fulton County and played a vital role in the largest voter registration drive in Georgia history. In addition to having a track record in leadership development, civic engagement and social justice, Dwayne has a professional background in both corporate banking and commercial real estate which he has interwoven in his efforts to foster community reinvestment and economic development in underserved neighborhoods throughout metropolitan Atlanta.

Dwayne is a native of Savannah, Georgia. He is a graduate of Goizueta Business School at Emory University with a Bachelor of Business Administration (B.B.A.) in Organization Management and Marketing. As a result of his service to the community, Dwayne has been featured in TIME Magazine, Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Boston Herald, Savannah Morning News and “Movement of the People”, a documentary profiling the 2008 presidential general election campaign season in Georgia.
